Our Prosecco Guide

DOC/DOCG (Controlled Origin)

Prosecco represents a territory with specific rules collected in the production specifications, determing all the supply chain steps: frm the definition of the production area to labelling. Only the wines that meet the required quality requirements can bear the name of the appellation. An official government seal is applied to the neck of each bottle to guarantee quality and authenticity. D.O.C. means “Denominazione di Origine Controllata” (Controlled Designation of Origin) and D.O.C.G “Denominazione di Origine Controllata e Garantita” (Controlled and Guaranteed Designation of Origin) and refear to different Designations of Origin and areas of production.

The version provided are:

Brut Nature

This is the version where there is no sugar dosage, characterized by intense gustatory notes.

Extra Brut

It is the version with a limited sugar residue, from 0 to 6 grams per liter, where sapid and acidic notes prevail.

Extra Dry

This is the traditional version, ideal for an aperitif and with dishes with a delicate flavors. The sugar residue goes from 12 to 17 g/l.

Dry

It’s the sweeter version with pronounced floral notes, perfect with desserts.

Millesimato

Millesimato indicates that at least 85% of the wine was made from grapes harvested in the same year. On the wine label, in addition to this wording, we find the indication of the year.

Rosè

Prosecco DOC Rosé is a combination of Glera (between 85% and 90%) and Pinot Noir grapes (between 10% and 15%), which are vinified in red. It is characterized by a pale pink with fine and persistent perlage, a result of extended stop on the fermatation yeasts (at least 60 days). The signature descriptors of Glera appear, namely flowers, apple and bright citrus, enriched with hints of raspberry bestowed by Pinot Noir.
